Commissioner Ann Cavoukian releasing results of her investigation into the TTC's video surveillance system

TORONTO – Ontario Information and Privacy Commissioner Ann Cavoukian is holding a news conference Monday morning to release the results of her investigation into a privacy complaint regarding the Toronto Transit Commission's video surveillance system.

As well as the results of her four-month investigation into the privacy complaint, her 50-page special report includes:

- A detailed review of the literature and analysis from various parts of the world on the effectiveness of video surveillance;
- An examination of the role that privacy-enhancing technologies can play in mitigating the privacy-invasive nature of video surveillance cameras; and
- 13 recommendations for the Toronto Transit Commission.

EVENT: Release of Commissioner Cavoukian's investigation report;

WHERE: Media studio at Queen's Park;

WHEN: 11 a.m., Monday, March 3, 2008;

FORMAT: The Commissioner will briefly summarize her findings, then take questions.

DETAILS: A news release, an executive summary of the special report and the special report will all be available as of 11 a.m. at the news conference.

The news release is also being distributed via CNW at 11 a.m. Monday.
